Today we'll take a special offering to raise money to help them furnish the guest rooms with a bed. Our goal is $450 – the best part is that the money we raise will be matched and will pay for a second set! Thanks in advance for your support.

Saved to Save Others

Jesus gave us a big job to do in Mark 16:15, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Jesus has given us a Kingdom Assignment, and the stakes couldn't be any higher. Eternal destinies are on the line.

We follow fantasy-sports standings, binge-watch the latest television show on Netflix, track the political races, line up for the latest Apple product, but we often miss the weight of Jesus' words.

And not only this, I miss God's Spirit prompting me placed right before my eyes every day in creation. As my three kids run around me, I'm convicted regularly that these are little people made in the image of God with souls that will last forever — and that I only have limited time to impact their lives for good. And yet I'm glued to my phone.

Therefore, we want to live with urgency. We want to stop frittering away our lives with inconsequential and meaningless activities.

Life and death hangs in the balance. Those who have been reconciled to God have a ministry of reconciliation to help others get right with him (2 Corinthians 5:19). This means we ought to consider our activities, priorities, and passions with urgency.

THREE QUESTIONS TO CONSIDER

We can agree that the kingdom is imminent, but it's meaningless when our lives fail to reflect urgency. So consider these three questions.

1. Who can I pray for regularly that doesn't know Jesus?

If we truly believe in the saving power of the gospel, the eternal damnation of the lost, and the eternal joy we have in Christ, then the least we can do is pray for the lost to be saved. This priority trumps coordinating your outfit, playing your golf game, scheduling your lunch plans, fulfilling your bucket list, or planning your next vacation. We tend to spend our free time on hobbies and diversions at the expense of asking God for more laborers to enter the harvest fields or consistently making ourselves available as a laborer (Luke 10:2).

2. How can I intentionally befriend and engage with lost friends and neighbors?

My wife likes to do all of our banking online, and when depositing checks, she always uses the ATM line instead of a checkout window or drive-up lane at the bank. She sometimes prefers people-less transactions. And I doubt that she's alone.

Yet because of the need to engage the lost, we must lean in where we'd prefer to lean away. How can you intentionally weave others into your life? Reduce the activities you do alone. Be strategic in inviting those who don't know Jesus into your activities in your daily life.

3. When can I introduce the good news of Jesus into our conversation?

I know we all do evangelism differently, some better than others. But at some point, you need to witness to the power and work of the gospel of Christ. Be winsome and loving, but also be clear and straightforward. Don't do "friendship evangelism" that has ten years of friendship but no evangelism. And don't mow people down with Bible verses when you haven't earned their trust, ear, or time. The balance is delicate, and the task is urgent.

There's no perfect way to do it. It will look different with your context, situation, personality, and gifts. But just don't make excuses for not doing it. Time is of the essence. Jesus calls his listeners to reconcile with urgency, and so we call others to do the same.
