History of the Pentecostal Revival

Throughout the latter half of the 19th century in the United States, Protestants from various backgrounds began to ask themselves why their churches did not seem to exhibit the same vibrant, faith-filled life as those in the New Testament; they sought the same experience seen in the New Testament.

Roots:

While there are some historical reports of certain charismatic manifestations occurring in the United States from 1850 to 1900, their duration was short-lived and remained isolated. Yet the one that began in the early 1900's in Kansas blossomed into a worldwide phenomenon in less than a century.

Charles Parham:

Charles Parham (1872-1929), a Methodist minister, moved to Topeka, Kansas. In October 1900, he opened Bethel Bible College in an old mansion that he rented. In December 1900, Parham assigned the whole school the topic of baptism in the Holy Spirit.

History of the Pentecostal Revival

The Topeka Outpouring:

On December 31, 1900, the student body held a New Year's Eve prayer meeting. The first person to report having the experience of being baptized in the Holy Spirit was a woman named Agnes N. Ozman. On January 3, 1901, many people reported experiencing baptism in the Holy Spirit evidenced by speaking in tongues, including Parham. The Topeka Outpouring was the first time a charismatic manifestation survived and expanded and eventually had the framework of a denomination built around it.

Expansion and Growth:

In December 1905, Parham decided to open a Bible school in Houston. A student at the Bible college in named W.J. Seymour would become the link between the Pentecostal ministry of Parham and the three-year revival that would take place on Azusa St. in Los Angeles, California beginning in 1906.

Azusa Street Revival:

In the summer of 1906, revival erupted 312 Azusa Street in Los Angeles, California. William J. Seymour, preached the restoration of biblical spiritual gifts. Seymour had been a student of Charles Parham, who provided the doctrinal framework for the young Pentecostal movement. Parham's identification in scripture of speaking in tongues as the "Bible evidence" (later called the "initial evidence") of Spirit baptism became a defining mark of the emerging Pentecostal movement. The revival soon became a local sensation, then attracted thousands of curiosity seekers and pilgrims from around the United States and the world.

Formation of the Assemblies of God:

As the revival rapidly spread, many Pentecostals recognized the need for greater organization and accountability. The founding fathers and mothers of the Assemblies of God met in Hot Springs, Arkansas on April 2-12, 1914 to promote unity and to coordinate a mission enterprise. They documented the primary reason for organizing: "To be the greatest evangelism the world has ever seen." It is the largest protestant denomination, with well over 60 million adherents worldwide. The General Council supported 2,691 foreign missionaries and associates last year. The Assemblies of God is the largest protestant denomination in Washington State.
