Malchus and Me

“...The servant's name was Malchus...”

(John 18:10).

All within the course of a few minutes, Malchus went from being a servant, innocent victim, patient, and back to being a servant. This was a mini-drama inside a major drama.

The chief priests had come for Christ with a detachment of soldiers. They were about to haul him away, but Peter tried to show his loyalty to his master. He was probably aiming to kill but because he was merely a fisherman, he may not have had a lot of sword practice. Jesus picked up the ear and healed Malchus, rebuking Peter for his misplaced zeal.

Malchus walked away with his master, the high priest, while the king of kings walked away surrounded by soldiers. We can't know what their interaction was like while they walked with Christ, but Malchus certainly had a lot to think about.

Why were they mistreating the person who had helped him?

What had he done wrong?
